ANEURISM IN THE UPPER LEG

An aneurysm or aneurism is a localized, blood-filled balloon-like bulge in the wall of a blood vessel. The most common locations include arteries in the abdomen, thigh, neck, and arm. A mycotic aneurysm may signal interrupted blood flow in an aneurysm in your leg. In rare cases, it may indicate compression of nearby nerves or compression of a vein next to the artery. Patients rarely have any symptoms due to femoral artery aneurysm, they are usually the thigh, or when blood clot builds up inside the femoral artery aneurysm. Peripheral aneurysms most commonly develop in the popliteal artery, which runs down the lower part of your thigh and knee. Though not as common, peripheral aneurysms can also occur in the iliac artery, which is the artery in your groin that conveys blood to your thigh and leg. If you have an aneurysm of one femoral artery, in 40-60% of the cases the other leg is also affected. A popliteal aneurysm is a swelling of the popliteal artery. The popliteal artery extends across the lower third of the thigh and the upper third of the calf. Feb 28, 2015.
